She was very mean to me, even physically kicking me in my shins as we sat across from each other. But, now I understand that she was in pain. I feel for her as someone who struggles with my own mental illness. I remember her specifically because she caused me physical and mental trauma. I never provoked her, but she obviously had dark demons haunting her. <hr/> Added: October 21, 2017

All through the Bible, there are passages that tell of the blessings on those who care for the poor: "The righteous considereth the cause of the poor" Prov.29:7, and "he that honoureth his Maker hath mercy on the poor" Prov. 14:31. I also remember her special love of animals of all kinds. Surely in the Kingdom she will be one of the keepers of the animals. My heartfelt thoughts are with Richard, Susan, Hannah, and Bethany.

But I did know her as a little girl. I can still picture her adorable, round face with all that long beautiful blond hair flowing down her back. She was so quite and had the sweetest little smile. After reading so many of the posts on this site and Myspace, I see that she kept that sweet smile and I'm so glad. Jerusha was in my dad's Sunday School class for a year or so. During that time, I remember my dad saying so many times how smart Jerusha was and how she stuck out about all the others. I also remember her demonstrating that at the Sunday School program at the end of the year. She couldn't have been more than about 5 or 6 and my dad had a quiz show that he hosted up on the stage for all of the members of his class. None of the kids knew what questions he was going to ask, so it was a pretty big deal for 5 and 6 year old kids. Jerusha knew all the answers! Added: August 17, 2007

I share the same memories of Jerusha that so many of you share. Her smiling face, her beautiful eyes, the sweetness in her voice. I just wish that I had spent more one on one time with Jerusha than I did. As Holly mentioned, I wish so badly we had known just how difficult it was for her to deal with the things going on inside her mind and could have helped her somehow. There is something though that we all can look forward to and that is the fact that Jerusha is no longer suffering those things anymore, but is merely sleeping until Christ returns to raise her again from her sleep and we will Lord willing see her again very soon. God be with you all in your grief and

She would go out of her way to make someone else happy. For instance she would see a homeless person on the street and would tell them she would bring them something to eat and no matter what she had planned she would find a way to bring it to them. She would give you her last dime if you needed it and would drive on an empty tank of gas to come get you. These are just a few examples of what a great person she was. Her smile and laugh were contagious. Her style and beauty were one of a kind. She could make friends with anyone. She was absolutely brilliant and was always questioning what others assumed to be true, an absolute genius. She had a tremendous love for God, her family and friends. Although it is saddening she is not with us in the present, I joyfully look forward to seeing her soon when Christ returns.

However, I am more than familiar with the plight that killed her. In January 2002, I attempted suicide and ended up in the emergency room and luckily I survived. Clinical depression is a very real disease that is curable and preventable with the right combination of medication and therapy and lots of support from our brothers and sisters in Christ. I was one of the lucky ones who survived and got the help I needed. I don't know the circumstances of why she felt the need to take her own life but unfortunately it's a very common tale that I am all too familiar with. So if you can see someone who is depressed or withdrawn, talk to them and if they talk about suicide, arrange for them to get professional help immediately! Hopefully Christ will return soon and all the misery and suffering of this present world will be eradicated! RIP Jerusha. Added: August 8, 2007
